SELECT POETRY.

WHAT THE CRITIC SANG ABOUT THE BONNET

With a ribbon and a feather and a bit of lace upon it;
And, that the other maidens of the little town might know it,
She thought she'd go to meeting the next Sunday, just to show it.

But, though the little bonnet was scarcely larger than a dime,
The getting of it settled proved to be a work of time;
So, when 'twas ready tried, all the bells had stopped their ringing,
And when she came to meeting, sure enough, the folk were singing.

Till the critic sang his psalm out behind and smooth-ed them down before.

Then, as I'm thinkin' wife of neighbor Jones, that man with stalwart arm—
He lives in peace and plenty on a forty-acre farm,
While men are ah-scrapin' us with hands and hearts a-sore,
Who own two hundred acres and still are wantin' more.

He has a loving wife within, as quiet as a mouse;
His children play around the house—their fathers life to charm—
Looking as neat and tidy as the tidy little farm.

No weeds grow in the cornfields, no thistles in his oats,
His horses show good keeping by their fine and glossy coats;
The cows within the meadow, resting 'neath the beechen shade,
Learn all their gentle manners of the gentle milking maid.

Within the field—on Saturday—he leaves no cradled grain
To be gathered on the morrow, for fear of coming rain;
He keeps the Sabbath holy—his children learn his ways—
And plenty fills his barn and bin after the harvest days.

He never has a lawsuit to take him to the town,
For the very simple reason, there are no line fences down.
The bar room in the village does not have for him a charm;
And I can always find my neighbor on his forty acre farm.

His acres are but very few, so he plows them very deep;
'Tis his own hands that guide the plow—'tis his own hands that reap;
He has a place for everything and things are in their places;
The aching smiter upon his fields, contentment in his faces.

May we not learn a lesson, wife, from prudent neighbor Jones,
And not—for what we haven't got—give way to sighs and moans?
The rich ain't always happy, nor free from life's alarm;
But blest are they who live content, though small may be their farms.

SELECT MISCELLANY.

TWO WIVES.

Deceit Followed by Vengeance.

A TALE OF NEW YORK AND SAN FRANCISCO.

"I found the body lying by the roadside. No weapon of any kind was near it. I hurried to the next house and knocked at the door. A man came out, and together we ran to the place. And that's all I know about it."

The coroner wrote rapidly, and then at the conclusion of this witnesses conclusion, invited the jury to examine the body. It was that of a young man with the fair hair blotted with blood about the forehead, and a deep cut in the temple; but, with the exception of these disfigurements, the face was placed and comely enough. The verdict was easily decided on:

"That Walter knowles met his death at the hands of parties unknown," etc.

In the village, a young place, and a good sample of the towns of rapid California growth, the murder made considerable sensation. Knowles, since he commenced to fill the position of telegraph operator in the place, was always very popular, and apparently had no enemies. He was an inoffensive, agreeable young man, and was not addicted to playing poker or billiards, or lounging about bar-room, or practicing any of the ordinary small vices of the young men of the period. Of his family connections, or where he came from, none were aware. His letters were from men of San Francisco, who, when written to on the subject, knew no more of the telegraph operator than that he was a pleasant fellow, and that he felt sorry for his bloody death. And so Knowles was laid to rest in the new cemetery with the mystery of his death unexplained.

Barbara French taught the village school, and was considered an unusually smart woman. She numbered among her suitors the principal saloon keeper of the place, and a dentist, who had recently opened an office in Shallowtown. Between them her time out of school and, rumor said, her affections were divided. Some, again, reported that Knowles had always had the inside track, and that though Barbara didn't show much sorrow at the murder, still her cheeks grew hollow and her voice thinner since the funeral; and, indeed, she was not the same girl at all. Nevertheless, the suitors continued their attentions, and the village its gossip; sometimes placing the dentist first in the lady's affections, and sometimes the saloon keeper, as either was seen walking home with her or accompanying her to school. Dr. Brown, the gossips said, was certainly the better match of the two; but Bill Bronson had the best business and the most money, and had his life insured besides. One evening the rivals met at the postoffice.

"How d'ye do, doctor?" said Bronson, coolly, as they stood side by side, waiting for their letters.

"Pretty well, thank you," replied the other in the same prying tone; "when did you have the pleasure of seeing Miss French?"

"Only last evening. She is very busy in her school now, and has not time to walk around."

With this they parted—Bronson to his saloon, and the dentist to his accustomed haunt in the neighborhood of the school room.

THE EVENING WALK.

"How are you, Miss Barbara?" said Dr. Brown, raising his hat as the school mistress, with her books under her arm, left the simple frame building wherein the youth of Shallowtown were taught the rudiments of knowledge.

Miss French smilingly reciprocated the salutation, and together they strolled down the village street and past Bronson's saloon, to the infinite chagrin of that individual.

The cemetery was situated about a mile or so from the town, and a pleasant, shady road led toward the quiet city. The dentist found all his efforts to entertain his companion fell very flat this evening. He mustered all his town intelligence together with the last sensations from the San Francisco papers, but Miss French appeared to take no interest in the local news or the sensations. At last he proposed they should turn back. The schoolmistress assented, and just at that moment a little pupil of hers ran out from a wayside house and ask her to come in and take a cup of tea with his mother.

"Won't you walk in, doctor?" asked the lady, languidly.

"No, thank you," replied the young man; I have an engagement in town. I'll wish you a good evening!" and he walked away stiffly, not a little mortified at his success in entertaining the belle of Shallowtown.

The moon rose clear and pale over the cypress trees in the cemetery before the school mistress left the cottage—then, instead of walking towards the village, she turned off into a by-path that led to the graveyard.

It was a strange fancy of the young woman to ramble on this autumn evening in a locality associated only with gloomy memories. As she opened the gate she paused for several minutes and looked earnestly along the road. A mile down its level length twinkled the lights of the village. Then, with all solemnity still in the peaceful moonlight, she opened the gate and walked quickly up the main path running through the centre of the enclosure. At the extreme end of this path was a fresh grave, with no ornament or sign beyond a plain wooden slab with the inscription:

WALTER KNOWLES,
Died September 30th,
Aged 27.

Here Miss French paused and laid her hands tenderly on the earth over the murdered man. Then, sobbing bitterly, she knelt down by the grave and murmured: "Walter, Walter, I did it for the best. You wronged me terribly, and now we are both avenged. But you must be happier than the woman you deceived."

Putting a handful of cold earth in the bosom of her dress, she arose, and, leaving the cemetery, walked rapidly home ward.

A STRANGE ARRIVAL.

"Darned if I ain't puzzled to know who that strange fellow can be," said Bronson, a few evenings after the school mistress's walk, to a group of his customers who were smoking, in the luxury of chairs, on his porch.

"I've heard he's a Frisco speculator," said a tall, raw-boned fellow who had driven in from his ranche to dispose of a few tons of hay to the Shallowtown livery stable.

"That's a nice looking woman with him," remarked another; "they say she's his sister."

The last arrivals in the village—a tall, grave-looking, well-dressed man, and a lady attired in deep mourning—had puzzled the good people of that burg. The strangers remained in their rooms the whole of the first day, and had asked no questions about the character or industries of the town. The man who kept the real estate office was in hopes they might purchase town lots and settle down. The undertaker thought they wanted to be buried in Shallowtown, for they had most particular inquiries of the hotel waiter about the location of the cemetery.

That evening the objects of so much curiosity walked through the main street and took the road to the cemetery. The next morning the gentleman called on the coroner and made inquiries about the death of Walter Knowles—where and in what position the body was found, and if a suspicion had fallen upon any one in the village.

"He belonged to a very respectable family in the east," he explained, "and I have been sent here to ascertain the exact circumstances of his death, and communicate with them. A female friend of the deceased accompanies me." And of course the coroner enlightened the villagers, and Shallowtown was most anxious to pay every tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased telegraph operator, and all who had known Knowles—which, indeed, were all in town—called on the strange gentleman. Barbara French alone, when it was suggested to her by a friend that she too should visit them, refused, and indeed, since their arrival, had not been seen beyond the school house and the cottage, a few hundred yards down the road from it, where she resided. A few said that Miss French had some of Knowles' letters which she did not wish to give up. Indeed, the man who had been forgotten a few weeks after his violent death, was now the grand topic of conversation in every saloon and house in Shallowtown.

The trustees of the Shallowtown school house were about to hold a public examination to test the proficiency of Miss French's scholars. The school mistress had been growing and more haggard every day, but appeared to brighten up as the examination approached. Bronson had offered several of his glass ornaments to decorate the school room, and Doctor Brown had been quite officious in hanging up in festoons and wreaths

At three o'clock on the afternoon of the day proceeding the examination, while Miss French sat in her school room looking moodily over an atlas, and while Dr. Brown, hammer in hand, was nailing and arranging, the mysterious stranger entered the school room.

Miss French left her seat and advanced towards him. The stranger drew a paper from his pocket, and extending his hand, said solemnly, "I arrest you, Barbara French, for the murder of Walter Knowles."

The school mistress stood motionless, while a deathly pallor crept over her features; the little boys and girls, who didn't understand the scene, looked wonderingly on, and the hammer fell from the dentist's hand, as he turned round on his ladder, actually frozen with amazement. Miss French, after a moment's wild stare around, fell to the ground with a shrill scream, and the stranger and the Doctor lifted her from the floor.

"Who, in God's name, are you?" asked the astonished dentist, "and what is this you have said about the murder of Walter Knowles?"

"I am a detective," rejoined the other, "and I hold positive truth that this young woman murdered the husband of the young lady who is now at the hotel in your town. I have worked this matter up, and we have discovered the criminal in in this unfortunte woman."

There never had been such a sensation in Shallowtown. At the trial, which took place six weeks after the arrest of the school-mistress, the entire mystery was explained. Walter Knowles was connected with a wealthy and respectable family in New York, and had married one of the beauties of the metropolis. A disreputable transaction, in which he had victimized one of his best friends, was made public in the circle in which he moved, and he was compelled to leave the country. In Shallowtown he turned one of his acquirements to account, and obtained a position in a telegraph office. He had remained true to his wife until the pretty face and strong character of the school-mistress led him to fall desperately in love with her. A secret marriage in San Francisco followed; and for one month the pair met secretly, keeping by mutual agreement, their union concealed from the world. One evening the school-mistress visited her husband's apartments, and, whilst arranging with loving care the articles in his bureau, a large package of letters attracted her attention. She opened them, and the whole history of Knowles' unworthiness and

Beaver, Pa., April 25, 1873.

We have received two communications on the same local subject within the past few days. For reasons which we will explain when we see the writers in person, their publication is withheld for the present.

SINCE the resignation of Messrs. Medill and Curtis from the Civil Service Board, the President has filled their places by appointing Messrs D. Eaton of New York and H. F. Shellabarger of Ohio, to serve in that capacity.

THE Republican State Committee will meet in Harrisburg on the first of May to fix the time for holding the state convention to nominate a Supreme Judge and State Treasurer. This is the first note of the approaching campaign.

"THE EVENING TELEGRAPH," a new candidate for public favor, has made its appearance in Pittsburg, and proves to be a large, neatly printed and "newsy" sheet. Its general make-up is creditable to the printers, and its editorials promise abundant evidence of ability and enterprise on the part of its owners. We wish it success.

THE Legislature which has just adjourned, appropriated six thousand dollars to defray the expenses of the three Commissioners from this State to the Exposition, to be held at Vienna, Austria, during the present summer. The law left the selection of the appointees to the Governor, who has named Senators Rutan, Graham and Davis. These gentlemen, we understand, and their wives will leave for Europe in the course of a few days.

A WASHINGTON correspondent says that United States Treasurer Spinner has confiscated the check of Judge Kelley for three hundred dollars handed him by Judge Poland by converting it into the Treasury. Spinner has waited since the adjournment of Congress to hear from Oakes Ames about the one thousand dollar certificate of Credit Mobilier stock which he alleged belonged to Kelley, and which Spinner sent Ames for the purpose of having transferred to Kelley. Ames, however, has evidently concluded to place the stock where it will do the most good, and he is satisfied that place is not the Treasury of the United States. Nothing has been heard either from Ames or the certificate of stock. Spinner has waited long and patiently for the stock, and he has at last determined to turn in what he had. It is understood that Ames does not intend to return the certificate.

GEORGE K. ANDERSON, Esq. formerly a resident of this county, but for a number of years past a prominent citizen of Crawford county, was a candidate three years ago, for the State Senate. While making the canvass he was pursued with a bitterness wholly inexcusable by his opponents. He was defeated, by a Mr. Delamater, after one of the hottest contests ever known in Crawford county. It is stated now, however, that Mr. Anderson is a candidate again for the same position, and that he will have no opposition for the nomination. This would seem to show pretty plainly that the infamous reports circulated about him three years ago were untrue, and that the men who put them afloat then acknowledge this much in giving him a cordial support now. Mr. A., will make a useful Senator, and that he will be elected we have now no doubt.

GENERAL FARNSWORTH, a republican member of Congress from Illinois, is down hard on the Salary grab, and spares the President and Congress but little in his criticism. He says:

> The plea that larger salaries are necessary to enable a President and members of Congress to live respectably in Washington, is not true. No other President has "asked for more." Mr. Lincoln saved half his salary, and that, too, when gold was 200 and over. And yet the allowances, "incidentals" and "contingencies," for Mr. Lincoln were far less liberal than for the present occupant of the White House. The following appropriations, made in 1864 and in 1873, are, I believe, fair examples, and may be regarded, as a pretty fair sample of our rapid growth in extravagant expenditures of late:

For Lincoln, 1864.		For Grant, 1873.
For Secretary to Commissioners	$ 1,500	For Secretary to Commissioners	$ 1,500
For Private Secretary, Steward & Messenger	3,000	For Private Secretary, Assistant Secretary, Steward, Messenger, and two Executive Clerks	12,800
For contingent expenses of Executive Offices	2,000	For contingent expenses of Executive Office	6,450
For two Night Watchmen	1,200	For one Watchman and two Doorkeepers	2,000
For two Door-Keepers	1,200	For two Door-Keepers and one Usher	3,000
For one Furnace Keeper	600	For one Furnace-Keeper	720
For fuel	2,000	For fuel	5,000
For repairs of house and for furniture, for fencing grounds, purchase of panels, and contingencies	6,000	For "annual" repairs of house and for furniture, and for repairs, &c., of green house	35,000
Total for Lincoln	$22,500	Total for Grant,	$70,470

THE newspapers of the State are just now busily engaged in discussing the constitutionality of the Governor's act in appointing Senators Graham, Rutan and Davis, as special Commissioners to visit the Vienna Exposition. Those who protest against the Governor's action in the premises point out the following clause in the Constitution, and urge with no little pertinacity that it "takes the starch right out" of the whole thing:

> "No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office under this Commonwealth which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such time."

On the other hand, the appointees, the Governor, and the friends of the parties immediately interested, allege that the sending of these Senators to Vienna does not confer an "office" upon them. They go simply to perform a duty, without asking or receiving anything for their services, over and above their necessary expenses while absent. These expenses have been reckoned at $6,000, or $2,000 to each of the appointees named, and that amount has been appropriated by the Legislature. While it is possible the letter of the Constitution has not been violated in the appointment of these Senators, its spirit is badly broken by the act. That this is so needs no argument. It ought to be patent to all who can read the clause quoted.

By a dispatch from Princeton, Illinois, to the Chicago Evening Journal, we have an addition of one name more to the distinguished roll of honor composed of those members of the disgraced 42nd Congress who neither voted to steal their constituents' money nor pocketed the plunder afterwards. Hon. John B. Hawley, of the Fourth Illinois, it is stated, "after the bill passed, gave to the Treasurer of the United States his check on the sergeant-at-arms of the House of Representatives for the full amount of his back pay, with the request that it be paid back into the Treasury, and it was so conveyed and receipted for."

WITHIN the past week we have added some thirty-three or thirty-five new, prepaid, yearly subscribers to our list, without any effort on our part, and still they come. While the mousing politicians and the would-be-ballot-box-stuffers and their conniving friends and apologists are doing their utmost to break the ARGUS down, the honest people of this county are according it the most generous support it ever received. Our advertising and job work patronage, and new subscriptions this spring are far in advance of any corresponding months in preceding years. For all of which we are profoundly grateful, and hope by a straightforward course, politically and otherwise, to merit a still greater prosperity.

GOVERNOR HARTRANFT, of Pennsylvania, has won an enviable popularity by the use of the veto power. The numerous jobs put up in the Legislature of that State and hurried through, have not found his pen acquiescing in a sealing signature. He has dared to say "no," and the people acknowledge him as the conservator of the public interests when it is assailed by bills granting powers contrary to the general good. We are glad to observe that the people's policy has become his policy, and his administration promises better things than was feared during a hotly contested campaign.—Alliance Monitor

The Monitor is published in Ohio. Its Editress, Mrs Brown, we presume, believes what she writes about Governor Hartranft. Here in Pennsylvania, however, a large majority of the people happen to know that nine-tenths of the bills vetoed by Governor Hartranft were never passed with the intention of making them laws. The whole veto business of the recent session of the Legislature was a well concocted scheme to fill the peoples' eyes with dust, and none but "marines" take any other view of the matter in this State. "Old soldiers" have not been deceived in the least by the feints at Harrisburg during the past winter. They have noticed that all "jobs put up" by the ring received his "sealing signature," while those having nothing in them, and for whose welfare nobody cared, went by the board just as the distinct understanding between the Governor and the Legislature intended they should. The seeming disagreement between the Executive and Legislative departments of the State government was a farce, and but few among us now fail to see it.

BUT few officers of our army who have died lately were held in higher esteem than gallant General Canby who fell a victim to the treachery of Capt Jack, near the Lava beds, a few days ago. He had been an active officer during the rebellion, was conspicuous for gallantry in battle, and had administrative abilities of a very high order. These qualities endeared him not only to the people of this country, but the army also loved him well. When General Sherman succeeded General Grant as General of the Army, he wrote to General Canby and told him he could make his own selection of his future field of duty. General Canby's services in the army having been particularly active, it was thought he was entitled to a a long period of rest. After a brief consideration of this kind offer General Canby said he thought he would like to make a quiet home at Portland, Oregon. He was therefore assigned to the command of the Department of the Columbia. He purchased a few acres of ground and erected a neat little home, and with his wife and adopted child, settled down to enjoy the repose of a life well spent in the service of his country. It was from the enjoyment of this domestic happiness that he was summoned to take the field in the service of his government. He did so with a true soldier's willingness, and although he opposed the peace policy, he conscientiously endeavored to carry out the orders and wishes of his superiors. It was in the strict execution of those duties that he met his tragic and nutimely end.

REV. DR. NEWMAN of Washington D. C. having no charge to take care of, concluded, a few months ago that he would like to take a trip around the world. Being in very high favor with the President he caused that officer to understand what his desires were, and in a short time a position as inspector of Consulates was created and given him, with a roving commission to visit all countries where we had consuls, and to note how they were getting along. The Dr. will start in a few days on a fixed salary to be paid out of the National treasury—he to defray his own traveling expenses. He takes a very different view of the position he holds from that one taken by the three Senators from this State who are to leave by the 26th on a pleasure trip for the Vienna Exposition. He insists upon it that he is an officer of the Government, commissioned as such and will visit all foreign countries as a Representative of the United States; while our Senators enter a vigorous protest to being called "civil officers" of Pennsylvania and point to the fact that they receive no "salary" in connection with their appointment, but merely have their expenses paid out of the State Treasury. The difference between them and Dr Newman is just this: They receive no salary but have their expenses paid, while he receives a salary and pays his own expenses. If they are not "civil officers" of Pennsylvania, he is not a civil officer of the United States. But if he is what he claims to be, they are certainly something more than errand boys to Vienna and back.

We are afraid the critics will soon begin to prove that our men are ahead of Dr. Newman, by showing that the $2,000 which each of them gets out of the State Treasury, will not only suffice to pay their "ordinary expenses" while away, but will leave them a liberal "salary" on hand besides.

HERE AND THERE.

—A reform which has been long talked about has at last been effected in Massachusetts. The Great and General Court has ordered that hereafter eggs shall be sold by weight. It is fixed that a dozen eggs shall weigh one pound and eight ounces.

—The Ohio Liberal is the name of a new weekly paper recently established at Mansfield, Ohio. It proposes to be the organ of the elements in both parties opposed to the present Administration, and urges the adoption of "Liberal" as the party name of the opposition.

—A singular duel took place the other day at Vicksburg. The weapons used were knives. The sweet names of the combatants were Rosa Dent and Violet Carter. As the result of the combat the Violet faded forever.

—The power of superstition still so remarkable among the black people of the South is shown in the case of Williams, a murderer, just tried at Mobile. After he had committed the crime, he cut off the hand of the murdered man and preserved it in quicksilver and lime, carrying it in his pocket and firmly believing that the talisman would protect him from any danger of detection. He was caught, however, for all that, and is likely to be hanged in spite of the preserved hand.

—A boy of tender years and heart has drowned seventeen kittens, tied tin pans to the tails of all the neighbors' dogs, ornamented his chamber by pinning flies to the wall, cut brickbats with his uncle's razor, blown up a pet canary with a fire-cracker, pulled the tail feathers out of two roosters, been thrown into the top of an apple tree by a cow that he was teasing, brushed his father's hat against the grain, told his sister's lover about her false teeth, and still his fond mother intends him for the pulpit.

—A man failed in Portsmouth, N. H., some thirty years ago. He settled with his creditors for sixty cents on a dollar, and went off, an insolvent emigrant, to the West. He was not heard of again, and had been gone so long that his oldest creditor might not have known him. But upon the 19th ult. there came a letter from him bearing the post-mark of a town in Texas. The bowels of the letter, so to speak, were $6,000, the entire remainder of this excellent man's indebtedness. So he has paid dollar for dollar, less interest; and if such be the moral influence of the Texas atmosphere, it would be well for many other insolvents to emigrate in that direction.

—Melancholy to relate, according to The Kennebec Journal, a lady in high life in Augusta, Me., recently got excessively inebriated, smashed the windows, the lamps, the furniture of the house, and disarranged and suspended the housekeeping generally. The neighbors were aroused; medical help was summoned; and the local scandal was excessive. It is understood that no liquor can be legally sold, for drinking, in Augusta. This lady probably had hers by express from Boston.

There are jokes, of course, about Brigham Young's moving. A library has usually been supposed to be the most difficult and bothersome thing to move in the world, but when you have a family of children like that of the Great Mormon, then you come indeed to the real difficulties of transportation. The wrestle of Brigham with the inventory of his children is seen to be terrible. He can never be sure that he has got them all together never sure that there is not a straggling pledge somewhere who has not been put into the cart, or rather carts. Young is said to have been making out an inventory of his offspring, thus far with unsatisfactory results, as the total is rather larger than he expected —To slander a schoolmarm is shameful, for verily her calling is necessary; but to say that a schoolmarm "drinks" (using the word in a bacchanalian sense) is to outrage human nature itself; for what could possibly be more revolting than the spectacle of an inebriated schoolmarm? A dame of this description, residing in Sumner, Me., has just recovered a verdict against a school committee man who had mildly impeached her sobriety. The schoolmistress, who is described as "pretty, of a florid complexion and jaunty red curls," showed that she only took wine for her stomach's sake after a fever. The jury gave her a verdict, but they didn't give her much else, for the damages were assessed at the miserable sum of One Dollar.

—One more ghost story! Last Summer, a farmer living on Shawnee prairie, near Attica, Ind., was taken off by lightning. His widow, after a proper season of grief, rejoined herself to a respectable citizen, and the parties would be perfectly happy but for the extraordinary conduct of the man who was struck by lightning. He continues to turn up and hang around in the most unreasonable way. While the widow was removing her little property to the house of her new husband, the ghost put in a most decided and peremptory appearance. There ought to be some way of arresting this ghost and holding it to bail to keep the peace according to law, and if the specters continue to come thus thick and fast, we shall look for some necessary and vigorous legislation against them.

—The Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives at Washington. Mr. Ordway, having received a large number of letters from members, telling him that they did not intend to draw the amount due them on the salary steal, applied to the First Comptroller for his opinion and advice. The latter decided that the letters were sufficient to authorize the covering of the money into the Treasury without any further authority. This will be a matter of surprise to a large number, some of whom had said they would not draw their money until the storm abated and the matter had gone out of the public mind. They supposed that they could notify Ordway they did not intend to draw the money, and that it would thus lie subject to their order for two years, when it would be turned into the Treasury. The Comptroller said the department was very lenient about receiving money, that there were no rules prohibiting the receipt of money, but it was more difficult to get it out.

Colonel J. Weyand, Editor of The Beaver Argus, and to whom it may concern:

DEAR SIR:—I have examined from week to week the editorial columns of that incorruptible family newspaper called the Beaver Radical, and have failed to be able to find one word in condemnation of the law passed the last session denying the right of the people of this county to punish those who pollute the ballot box by bold fraud.

Now, sir, I appeal to you to publish this letter and I am responsible for it. To begin, the law extended to the borough of Beaver Falls to authorize the appointment of commissioners, was obtained by your dishonest, unscrupulous, unworthy, untruthful, unreliable and bribe taking treacherous half-breed Indian, J. S. Rutan, and he it was who attempted to operate at the town of Beaver Falls under cover of that law.

At the same time he and his masters furnished to the two miners of Industry, this county—Sims and Proudlock—false and illegal naturalization papers to vote for the bony rooster, J. S. Rutan, at the October election. They, as all the readers of the ARGUS, (not the Radical) know, were arraigned for trial, but the learned gentlemen who were counsel for Sims and Proudlock, made known to the cadaverous rascal at the November Court last, that he must get out of this thing, or he would be sent to the Western Penitentiary, where he should have been long since; hence the law obtained by J. S. Rutan, taking the case of Sims and Proudlock out of the county, thereby depriving the people of the county of any redress for such frauds. This is your Senator ye puritans, and he says you are bound to send him to the U. S. Congress the next time, and it would be just like you to do it. And one of his last acts is what here follows as clipped from the Lancaster Express of date April 16 inst., and I need say no more only to add that I suppose that the contemptible fraud is now at home and cannot charge me with taking advantage of his absence, and that he may read all here written before he leaves for Europe.

Believing that I am performing a duty that all true citizens owe to their country, I am as ever most respectively W. W. IRWIN.

P. S. It is well known that the Lancaster Express is a radical Republican paper, and sustains President Grant's administration, but is a hater of liars and frauds.

THE RING TRIO FOR VIENNA.

Now that the great smoke created during the session by the vetoes of nearly one hundred bills of the Legislature is beginning to clear away, some of the pernicious schemes forced through are becoming visible. The most contemptible steal of the numerous jobs put through by the Ring is the appropriation of six thousand dollars for three commissioners to represent the Beaver-Cameron Ring at Vienna.

Had this appropriation been made for the purpose of sending three gentlemen, eminent in the State for learning, character, practical mechanical knowledge of scientific attainment, it would have at least some shadow of reason for the donation of six thousand dollars of the public money. But when we scan the list of the illustrious trio of the State Senate, Graham, Rutan and J. De-pooh Davis (Democrat), we ask ourselves why were these men chosen as representatives of Pennsylvania, with formidable credentials over the great seal of the State, and with crispy greenbacks from Mackey's vaults, fraudulently supposed to be the State Treasury? Why did Hartranft, particeps criminis in the petty job, appoint these three Senators, distinguished neither for learning, great inflexibility, or even piety, excepting the Pecksniffian Graham? The answer is, because they were to be rewarded for services rendered the ruling powers at Harrisburg, and when the fiat went forth, the subservient legislature placed the section in the bill, and the Governor, who had been allowed free range to kill off bills that did not affect the Ring, was called in from the Veto Butcher Shop and forced to confirm this contemptible iniquity.

What stamps the whole proceeding with a reproach that should raise the finger of scorn throughout the State, is the fact that this section was never passed on by either House, but like every other fraud that will not bear daylight, was sneaked into the appropriation bill by the Conference Committee. When we remember that the sanctimonious Graham and the lean and hungry looking Rutan were members on part of the Senate, and unlawfully inserted this section to appropriate funds to place in their own pockets, for a summer jaunt to Vienna, and which section, under the rulings of Speaker Anderson, was held by the Senate to be lawful, the true nature of the mean affair is apparent. The contemptible position of that arrant demagogue Rutan, is further aggravated by the fact, that when a joint resolution, in the early part of the session, was passed, authorizing the appointment of three Commissioners, he wanted it distinctly understood that they were to serve without pay; and while plotting with his fellow-conspirator Graham for this raid on the coined sweat drops of the taxpayer, was virtuously fighting against the pay of House members on contested committees.

This section, if any more was necessary, will tear the mask from Graham, with his pretended high-toned virtues, and place him where he deserves to be, in the company of Rutan and the conceited Democratic tool of the Ring, Davis, of Berks.

The Wrecked Atlantic—Recovery of Forty More Bodies.

HALIFAX, April 17.—The weather being favorable to-day, divers renewed the search for bodies and up to the time the steam tug left Prospect forty-two had been recovered. They were all unrecognized steerage passengers, principally women and children. They were buried without delay, the White Star agents having made all the necessary arrangements. The Dominion government agrees to pay a share of the expense. There is no cargo enough saved to load the steamer Peril, sent from New York. Capt. Williams, Mr. Brady, Mr. Bennett and others came up from the wreck to-night to be present when the decision of the Court of Inquiry is given to-morrow. It is reported that the bodies of a woman and child drifted ashore near Lunenburg. Mr. Todd, who lost his father and mother on the Atlantic, arrived this morning from Chicago, in search of their remains and their property. The body of the father had been recovered and buried at Prospect. The money found on his body was restored to the son. Warrants were issued yesterday for a man named Slaughen White and his three sons, residents of Prospect, suspected of pilfering at the wreck. A quantity of baggage was found in the father's possession, including some identified as the property of Miss Scrymser.

THE MODOC MASSACRE.

Further Particulars of the Killing of Gen. Canby and Dr. Thomas—Their Remains Forwarded—Commissioner Meacham Not Expected to Recover—Preparations to Attack and Exterminate the Savages.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 13.—The remains of Gen. Canby and Dr. Thomas reached Yreka this evening. A procession of citizens went to receive them. Flags were at half mast. Secretary Delano was hanged in effigy at Yreka. Canby's body is in charge of the Masons.

The following additional particulars of the massacre of the Peace Commissioners have been received: Capt. Anderson, who was at Col. Mason's camp when the attack was made on the Peace Commissioners party, says Lieutenants Sherwood and Doyle were allured out from camp by a white flag. They went four or five hundred yards, when they met what they supposed were only two Indians, who said they wanted to talk to "Little Tyee"—Colonel Mason. They were told they did not want talk, and for the Indians to go back to their camp and they would return to theirs. As they turned around the Indians, four in number, fired upon them, wounding Lieutenant Sherwood in the arm and thigh, the latter being a very serious wound, the bone having been shattered by a bullet. Captain Anderson, who was on duty at the signal station on Hospital Rock, saw plainly the attack upon Colonel Mason's front and telegraphed General Gillem to notify the Peace Commissioners immediately. Colonel Biddle, who was at the signal station of Gillem's headquarters when this message was received, at once placed his field glass upon General Canby, as the party sat together about one mile distant. Very soon the whole party scattered. He followed the General's course with his glass while he ran about fifty yards, threw up his arms and fell backward dead. Two of the Indians who were following him jumped upon him. One, believed to be Captain Jack, stabbed him in the neck, and he was completely stripped. Dr. Thomas was also entirely stripped. His purse, containing about $60, was found under his body, the Indians having dropped it. Mr. Meacham was shot in three places, one ball entering at the inner corner of his right eye, another on the side of his head; these are both believed to have lodged within his cranium, and the third passed through his forearm. He also received a cut in his left arm and a scalp wound five inches in length. He was found about thirty yards from the spot where the slaughter began, in a direction opposite to that taken by Gen. Canby. He was entirely stripped, and bewildered in mind. The captain spent an hour with him yesterday morning. He was conscious and in no pain. Meacham says he thinks he shot Sconchin in the abdomen, and blood was found which indicated that one of the Indians had been wounded. The soldiers were ready started on a double quick immediately upon the firing of the shots, and met Lyer and Riddle and his wife before they were half way to camp. The Indians retired to their retreat about six yards in advance of the soldiers, who followed them half a mile beyond the murder ground. There they remained till dark, and were withdrawn, as they were not provided with supplies. To-day would be spent in closing upon the red devils, and if a general assault was not made to-day, it certainly would be to-morrow.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 14.—Gen. Scofield sent a dispatch to Gen. Gillim as follows: "Please inform me fully of the situation, so that I may send more troops, if necessary; or if the Indians escape the Lava beds, that I may send troops to operate against them from another direction. Let me know fully what you want. I suppose you have force enough to destroy the outlaws unless they succeed eluding you. Nother short of their prompt and sure destruction will satisfy the ends of justice or meet the expectations of the government.

"JNO. M. SCOFIELD."

SAN FRANCISCO, April 14.—The remains of Gen. Canby and Dr. Thomas have been lying in state at Yreka Masonic Hall all day, and were visited by nearly the whole population. Over one thousand persons have passed in. At twelve o'clock the children of the public schools passed in procession, about three hundred in number. The coffins are wrapped in national colors and strewn with wreaths and flowers. Expressions of great sorrow are visible in every countenance.

General Canby's remains will be forwarded to Portland this afternoon, by stage, in care of the General's Aid, Captain R. H. Anderson, and will be met at Roseburg, Wednesday evening, by a special train from Portland. Dr. Thomas' remains leave for Redding by private conveyance at two o'clock this afternoon, and will arrive there Wednesday morning.

PREPARING FOR THE ATTACK.

A special messenger returned to Yreka to-night from the Lava bed. Nothing definite from the seat of war. There have been no fighting up to the time he left. Ammunition and supplies had been crowded forward with dispatch. The surgeon extracted the bullets from Meacham's wounds. There is little hope of his recovery. There were various rumors as to when the attack would be made, some state to-day and some to-morrow. They are waiting for the arrival of the Warm Spring Indian scouts, to be used between the lines of Gen. Gillem and Colonel Mason's command, they with cavalry making the third line, and all advancing together from the north, south, east and west. It is believed the battle will be a hard one. No quarters will be shown the Modocs. The Pit River Indians remain quiet and peaceful, but if the Modocs escape there will be danger. Every horse at Hot Springs, Surprise Valley and Big Valley is down with the epizootic.

ARMS FOR CITIZENS ON THE FRONTIER.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The Secretary of War, upon the recommendation of Senators Mitchell and Kelley, has ordered five hundred stand of breech loading rifles to be turned over from the arsenal at Vancouver to the authorities of Oregon, for the use of citizens on the frontier.

The Illness of the President.

A Washington special of the 12th to the New York. Graphic says: The illness of President Grant gives serious alarm to his friends. It is an open secret here that the President is troubled with a complaint in the kidneys, which affects him very seriously at times. Indeed, it is sometimes feared that he is in the incipient stages of Bright's disease. He has suffered painfully without betraying his sufferings; and it is now stated authoritatively that the effusion of blood and the bloated appearance of his face, which have been too frequently attributed to a less excusable cause, are due to the periodical attacks of his complaint, which somehow affects the nerves and blood vessels of the cerebellum, and gives a conjested appearance to his face. Your correspondent knows several instances, when very injurious impressions have been created respecting the President, derived from the appearance of his face—which is due entirely to the chronic difficulty above alluded to. The President is easier now than he has been; but the very worst is to be feared when one of these acute attacks occur. The President is very anxious to keep his engagement on Monday at New Haven, and attend the annual meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic, but unless more favorable symptoms intervene he will not be able to leave the White House.

The Modoc Gibraltar.—A Description of the Fiteen Character of Great Lava Beds.

The strongh old of the Modoc Indians is an irregular volcanic surface of basalt, trachyte, etc., and occupies with but few intervals one hundred square miles. Jesse Applegate, an early pioneer of Oregon, at once one of the Modoc Commissioners, attempts a description as follows:

"If you can, imagine a smooth, solid sheet of granite ten miles square and 500 feet thick covering resistless mines of gunpowder, scattered at irregular intervals under it; that these mines are exploded simultaneously, rendering the whole field into rectangular masses from the size of a match-box to that of a church, heaping these masses higher in some places and leaving deep chasms in others. Following the explosion the whole thing is placed in one of Vulcan's crucibles and heated up to a point, when the whole begins to fuse and run together, and then suffered to cool.

The roughness of the upper surface remains as the explosion left it, while all below is honey-combed by the cracks and crevices caused by the cooling of the melted rock.

An Indian can, from the top of one of these stone pyramids, shoot a man without exposing even a square inch of himself. He can, with due haste load and shoot a common muzzle-loading rifle ten times before a man can scramble over the rocks and chasms between the slain and the slayer. If at this terrible expense of life a force dislodges him from his cove, he has only to drop into and follow some subterranean passage with which he is familiar to gain another ambush, from whence it will cost ten more lives to dislodge him; and so on ad infinitum.

A Singular Quarrel.

The village of Bethlehem, in Syria, the birth place of Christ, is at this time the scene of a disgraceful quarrel between the Latin and Greek Patriarchs. In the quaint old church which is supposed to stand on the spot where stood the manger in which Christ was laid at his birth, the chief of the Catholics has hung a tapestry curtain across the "Grotto of the Nativity," in the place of the one burnt in 1871, and which the Ottaman government was to have replaced in order to end the traditional disputes between the Greek and Latin Churches, relative to the proprietary rights in said curtains. This action of the Latin clergy has called out a protest from the Greek, which the Greek Patriarch at Jerusalem has addressed to the Sublime Porte. Both parties have now agreed to refer the question to the French Ambassador at Constantinople.

Butler's Three-Cent Joke.

According to the Boston Post General Butler grows more and more jocose every day. This is the way he carries on his refunding process, according to that paper: "General Butler has received letters from various parts of the country requesting him to pay the writers the three cents which he estimates is the proportion of extra tax that will be imposed upon each taxpayer in consequence of the Congressional salary steal." The General replies promptly, and instead of franking he puts a three-cent postage stamp on the letter, which is worded thus:

"DEAR SIR:—You will find your three cents on the outside of this letter. Yours truly,

BENJ. F. BUTLER."

A GREAT CURE

By Inhalation.

A TESTIMONIAL FROM MRS. DOWNING,

Of Wooster, Ohio.

WOOSTER, O., November 11, 1872.

I have been afflicted with Catarrh for over 25 years, and had consulted different physicians, whose prescriptions relieved me but little, if any at all. I tried some catarrh remedies, which proved worse than useless, and I believe they were the cause of the disease going to my lungs and heart.

Night sweats, hectic fever, loss of appetite, bleeding from the lungs, and other symptoms of Consumption appeared, and I became much discouraged, and so weak I could scarcely sit up.

In this condition I applied to Dr. Hunter, scarcely hoping to obtain any relief. I am thankful to say that from the day I commenced the use of his Inhalations and other treatment, I have steadily improved, until I feel that I have recovered substantial health.

I consider that my recovery is truly remarkable, and as such it is looked upon by my friends and neighbors. I now enjoy better health than I have for years, and can perform my household duties with perfect ease.

I trust by the favor of God, and the kind and skillful treatment of Dr. Hunter, I may be restored to perfect health.

I would say to the many afflicted as I have been, go to Dr. Hunter at once, with your minds fully made up to follow his rules and directions, and you will find a physician and friend in whose hands you need not fear to trust your health.

ELIZABETH DOWNING.

Mrs. Downing is the wife of Samuel P. Downing, a brother of Judge Downing, of Wooster, Ohio, and will cheerfully answer all inquiries made, either personally or by letter.

WHAT IS

INHALATION?

It is the method of treating diseases of the nasal cavities, Throat and Lungs, by making them into the vapor of medicines, from an Inhaling Instrument.

Dr. Hunter has devoted many years to this specialty, and publishes testimonials from some of the most eminent journalists, ministers, and other persons in this country. Send for a pamphlet containing these.

If you are afflicted with Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh, instead of wasting time and money with general practitioners and patent medicines, go, or send an intelligent statement of your case to Dr. Hunter, who has spent a life-time treating these diseases, and receive such treatment as the particular nature, stage and symptoms of your disease requires. An opinion costs you nothing, and his fees for treatment are low.

Good NEWS.—Go to the new Shoe Store of G. C. Atkins & Co., for the cheapest and latest style of Boots and Shoes.

Left for Parts Unknown.—The Pittsburgh Gazette of last Thursday contains the following item touching a young man whose name has been frequently mentioned of late in connection with high crimes:

"Babe" Montgomery, who was arrested a short time since and held to bail in the sum of $2,000 for trial, on a charge of felonious assault and battery, has "skipped" the bail, and cannot now be found. His bond-man, Mr. Frederick Schild, has paid over the amount. It will be remembered that "Babe" attempted to shoot Robert Edwards about six weeks ago, and that before he had a hearing in the case, District Attorney Bayne called the matter up in the Criminal Court, and a process was issued, but "Babe" has never been found since.

Cupid's Ambuscades.—The sly archer, love, shoots his arrows from many coigns of vantage, but it is doubtful if he delivers his heart-taking shafts from any ambush with more effect than when he arms them from the braids and folds and ringlets of a superb head of hair. Ladies who have not been favored by nature with this crowning charm of womanhood, can readily and certainly increase the volume of their hair, and impart to it a silken lustre by using Lyon's Kathairon as a daily dressing; while those whom Providence has blessed with a superabundance of this "Glory" of the sex, can preserve it, undiminished, in quantity and undiminished in beauty to the latest period of life. There is a germinating principle in the Kathairon which literally compels the hair to grow. It exterpates scurf, dandruff, and all exfoliations and excrescences of the scalp which interfere with the rapid and healthy development of the fibers.

Found Drowned.—Two men, strangers, were found dead, in the Ohio river near Rochester, on last Wednesday. Neither of the men were identified, and both were buried in the cemetery near that town. One was five feet eight inches in height, and the other five feet ten. A coroner's inquest was held in both cases, and a verdict of death by drowning rendered in each.

An Immense Egg.—John Y. Marks, esq., of Rochester, has sent us an egg produced by a black spanish hen owned by him, which takes the "starch right out" of all the big eggs we have seen any account of this spring. The egg measures 8¾ inches one way, and 6¾ inches the other, and weighs 5 ounces. The hen that laid it must have immense egg power. We are clear on that point

Music.—We would call the attention of our readers to the card of Charlotte Blume, to be found in our advertising columns. Her house is one of the oldest in Pittsburgh, and her warerooms will be found constantly stocked with some of the finest instruments manufactured in this country. "Knabe" Pianos, for which she is agent, have long been acknowledged superior to all others. Haines Bro.'s Pianos are the finest and most durable low-priced instruments in the market; while Geo. A. Prince & Co.'s Organs are acknowledged, for tone and durability, to be unequalled. She also keeps on hand a large stock of small instruments; also Sheet Music, Books, &c. Persons ordering from a distance are assured of receiving most prompt attention. Catalogues and price lists mailed to any address. Her warerooms are located No. 19 Sixth Avenue, just opposite Trinity Church.

Only Two.—There are only two cities in western Pennsylvania, that voted against license at the recent election—New Castle and Monongahela. Well done.

The Lamp of Life.—Truth is the lamp of life, and the sufferer from Consumption or any chronic disease, will thank us for pointing out Dr. Keyser and Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure, as one of, nay, in truth, as the most important remedy of modern discovery. It is a well-known fact in Pittsburgh that the Doctor has no superior in the treatment of chronic disease of any sort, and having cured himself many years ago of consumption, no man could be better qualified to give advice and counsel to others, especially, we would add, as he is a ripe and well educated physician, of over thirty years' successful practice. An essay sent wherever it is wanted, free.

Dr. Keyser's office, 197 Liberty street, Pittsburgh, Pa. Price of Lung Cure $1.50 per bottle, or $7.50 per half dozen.

Free of Charge.—Call at Hugo Andriessen's Beaver Drug Store, Beaver, Pa, and get a sample bottle of Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup, free of charge. It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and for any person suffering with a severe cough, heavy cold settled on the breast, consumption or any disease of the throat and lungs it has no equal in the world. Our regular size bottles 75 cents. In all cases money will be promptly returned if perfect satisfaction is not given. Two doses will relieve any case. Try it nov29-1y.

About the R. D.'s—The medical fraternity—recent past and present—of Beaver, have been quite frisky.

Dr. J. S. McNutt, after building up a fine practice here, sold his personal effects and moved to Philadelphia where he is still engaged in the healing art.

Dr. D. McKinney, having been engaged in the practice of medicine here for a number of years, struck his tent in Beaver and pitched it in New Brighton, where he attends to the wants of those who need his services.

Drs. M. & J Lawrence—father and son—have been engaged in the practice of medicine in Beaver since last spring, and at the present time are doing a fine business. They have recently moved their office from the McKinley building to the room formerly occupied by the Deputy U. S. Assessor on Third street.

Dr. J. W. Miller, has recently moved from Wheatland here and comes highly recommended by those who know him and know of him. He is a graduate of Washington College, had some experience in the army as a surgeon, and has practiced his profession for eight or ten years.

Dr. Thos. Donehoo, practiced medicine in this vicinity some years ago, but on account of some business transactions which demanded his personal attention in the west, he moved to Missouri, and after being there eight years, he has returned to Beaver and tenders his professional services again to the people of this locality. He has practiced medicine for twenty-five years, and is spoken of as a skilful physician.

The, professional cards of the Drs, Lawrence, and Miller and Donehoo, will be found elsewhere in the ARGUS.

Light Fingered Law-Makers.—The correspondent of the Lancaster Express, refering to the closing scenes of the recent session of our Legislature, has the following to say about the honesty of some of its members:

"The House seems to have done nothing this week but pass remarkable resolutions. One was by Brockway, to appoint three detectives to catch fellows stealing articles from members' desks. The Speaker with bad judgment appointed three country members. Why did he not take them from the Philadelphia delegation, as quite a number were detectives before misfortune overtook them and compelled them to go to the Legislature. It is singular that nothing can be left on a desk without disappearing. If one of the extra Sergeants-at-arms was set to watch some lady's over coat it would be safe. Purdon and Hand-Books are not secure under lock and key, and with swarms of employees in the House, desks will be opened at night and stamps and books taken from them. There seems to be contagion in the air, which taints the blood, and going to the fingers produces irresistible contraction of the muscles when touching anything.

Ruined by a Silver Tea Set.—Said a young husband, whose business speculations were unsuccessful: "My wife's silver tea set, the bridal gift of a rich uncle, doomed me to financial ruin. It involved a hundred unexpected expenses, which, in trying to meet, have made me the bankrupt that I am." His is the experience of many others, who less wise, do not know what is the goblin of the house, working its destruction. A generous father of great wealth exceeding mortified his daughter by ordering to be printed on her wedding cards, "No presents, except those adapted to an income of $1000." Said he, "you must not expect to begin life in the style I am able by many years of labor to indulge; and I know of nothing which will tempt you to try, more than the well-intentioned but pernicious gifts of rich friends." Such advice is timely. If other parents would follow the same plan many young men would be spared years of incessant toil and anxiety; they would not find themselves on the downward road because their wives had worn all of their salary or expended it on the appointments of the house. The fate of the poor man who found a linch-pin and felt obliged to make a carriage to fit it, is the fate of the husband who finds his bride in possession of gold and silver valuables, and no large income to support the owner's gold and silver style.

A Hint For Girls.—Dio Lewis, who has made dom stic life a study, thinks he has discovered one of the most prolific sources of wedded infelicity. Hear him: "Thousands and thousands of men are turned back in their love by finding that, instead of the sweet perfect being they had fancied, there is deficiency and disease. The new husband finds that the beautifully moulded form he has admired so long, is only a trick of the dressmaker; and the body which had seemed so sweet and pure is the victim of displacement and disease. Thousands of husbands turn away in bitter disappointment." There, girls, you have the opinion of one who knows all about such matters. We agree with him. Look to your bodily health. Eschew tight-lacing, thin-soled shoes and low-necked dresses; take exercise in the open air, avoid night dissipations, eat substantial food, throw exciting novels to the mind aside, and take to more substantial reading. Be assured, that Dio Lewis is right. Nothing will sooner change a young husband's love to disgust than finding out after marriage that he has been deceived in regard to the health of the woman to whom he has united his fate.

"Behind the Scenes in Washington" is the suggestive title of a book now in press, by the National Publishing Co., Philadelphia, Pa. It will contain graphic accounts of the Credit Mobilier investigation, the Congressional Rings, political intrigues, workings of the lobbies, and tell how the public money is squandered, &c., &c. We have seen some of the specimen pages of the work here refered to, and can assure our readers that it will be an intensely interesting production. Here is an extract from one of the pages sent us, showing how lobbyists accomplish their purposes:

"It is very common for lobbyists to approach public men through their families. Mrs. A. or Mrs. B. will receive magnificent presents from persons who ere but little more than casual acquaintances. Their first impulse is to return the articles, but they are so handsome, and just what they have been wanting so long, without being able to afford them, out of their husbands' incomes—for the lobbyists are careful to inform themselves what will be most acceptable—and so, after a little struggle, they decide to keep the gifts.

Of course some especial civility must be shown the givers of the presents. This is done, and the first point of lobbyist is gained. In a little while the wife is won over. She thinks the scheme an excellent one—and honestly thinks it too—and will be so beneficial to the country! She does not like to meddle in her husband's affairs, but she will mention the matter to him. The better half of the official being thus secured, the remainder can and does make but a feeble resistance, and his aid is secured for the scheme.

This is lobbying in its mildest form, and official integrity has sunk to so low an ebb that it sees nothing wrong in it. Men's consciences are tough now, and that nice sensitiveness of honor which once marked the public men of our country, seems to have departed from us. Men go into public life now to make money, as they would enter upon a trade. The lobby offers them a fine opportunity for the gratification of their desires, and they are not slow to avail themselves of it. Alas for the country in the hands of such men!

Doctor Franklin.—At the time when the celebrated Dr. Franklin lay upon his death-bed, he was visited by a young man who had a great respect for his judgment in all things; and having entertained doubt as to the truth of the scriptures, he thought that this awful period afforded a suitable opportunity of consulting the doctor on this important subject. Accordingly, he introduced it in a solemn and weighty manner, inquiring of Franklin what were his sentiments as to the truth of the scriptures. On the question being put, although he was in a very weak state, and near his decease, he replied:

"Young man, my advice to you is, that you cultivate an acquaintance with, and a firm belief in the holy scriptures, this is your certain interest." So also says the voice of God. J. K. M.

The Seed Drill Swindle.—A case of considerable public interest was tried during the session of the Court last week. It appears on the trial that about the latter part of December, 1869, a couple of men called upon Mr. J. M. Curry, a resident of North Strabane township, and represented themselves to be engaged in establishing agencies for the sale of "Ingall's Patent Seed Drill." After some persuasion Mr. Curry was induced to accept an agency upon the promise of quite a liberal commission on his sales. The terms having been arranged the gentle strangers produced a number of papers, articles of agreement, blank order, &c., &c., and informed Mr. Curry that it was necessary that he should sign in duplicate an order for a specimen machine, one of which they would retain; the other was to be forwarded to the manufactory. The order having been duly signed the agents went on their way rejoicing, and visions of happiness in the way of quick sales and large profits danced before Mr. C.'s eyes. The specimen drill never arrived, however, but Mr. Curry, in the course of a few months, received a notice from the First National Bank of this place to the effect that a note for two hundred dollars signed by him and payable to Alfred Ingalls or bearer had been forwarded to that institution for collection. Not remembering to have made such instrument, Mr. Curry called at the bank and requested to see the note. It was shown him, and lo, the duplicate order for a seed drill metamorphosed in those brief months into a promisory note for two hundred dollars. Payment was refused and the bank returned the note to its correspondent. In a short time the note with a number of others of the same kind was placed in the hands of certain members of the bar for collection by legal process. Suit having been brought, the case was put down for trial last week. It was claimed by the plaintiffs that they bought the note in good faith, for a valuable consideration, before maturity, and that inasmuch as they had no knowledge of the fraud by which it was obtained, they had a right to recover. It was proved that the note was obtained by them in a land trade, in which they gave almost full par value for it. On the part of the defendant nothing particular excepting the transaction between Curry and the men who called upon him was shown, and after argument the court charged the jury substantially in accordance with the view taken by the plaintiff's counsel. After deliberating all night the jury came into court, and having announced their inability to agree, were discharged.

Quite a number of these notes have been procured by swindlers from our farmers, Ingalls alone having succeeded in securing eleven of them. The decision in this case, which will probably be reached when it is again tried, is, therefore, of importance to the public. Especially to those unfortunate individuals who have been victimized by "patent rights" of various kinds. It is indeed strange that any one should have been victimized after this same swindle had been so often exposed. When the notes thus obtained get into the hands of innocent third parties the sweet words of the poet apply with full force—

"When worthy farmers stoop to folly,
And find too late that rogues betray,
What art can soothe their melancholly,
What charm can drive their grief away.

"The only means they have to cover,
Their folly from the light of day,
Is, when they're in and done for,
Quickly and silently—to pay."

NEW SHOE STORE.—If you want a good pair of Boots and Shoes of the latest style at a reduced price, go to G. C. Atkins & Co's.

Postal Cards—Important Information for the Public.—The third assistant postmaster general has given notice that the necessary appropriation having been made for the purpose, the department will, on the 1st of May next, commence the issue to postmasters of the postal cards authorized by the act of June 8, 1872.

The card adopted is five and one-eighth inches in length and three inches in width, and is made of good stiff paper, water-marked with the initials U. S. P. O. D. in monogram.

The face of the card is engraved, surrounded by a border in scroll work one-eighth of an inch in width. The one cent stamp printed on the upper right hand corner is from a profile bust of the Goddess of Liberty looking to the left and surrounded by a lathe work border with the words "U. S. Postage" inserted above, and "one cent" below.

On the upper left hand corner are the words "United States Postal Card," with directions to "write the address only on this side—the message on the other." Underneath, and occupying the lower half of the card are ruled lines on which to write the address, the top line being prefixed with the word "To."

The back of the card, intended for the communication, is entirely plain, being devoid even of ruled lines. In color the body of the card is light cream, the printing velvet brown. No variation in size, shape, color, or in any other particular, will be made from the regular style to accommodate special cases; nor will the department do any printing on the cards beyond the engraving specified in the description.

Postal cards will be sold for one cent each, neither more nor less, whether in large quantities or in small.

The object of the postal cards is to facilitate letter correspondence and provide for the transmission through the mails at a reduced rate of postage, of short communications, either printed or written in pencil or ink. They may therefore be used for orders, invitations, notices, receipts, acknowledgments and other requirements of business and social life. And the matter desired to be conveyed may be either written or in print, or partially in both. In their treatment as mail matter they are to be regarded by postmasters the same as sealed letters, and not as printed matter, except that in no case will unclaimed cards be sent to the dead letter office.

An ordinary printed business card may be sent through the mails when prepaid by a one cent postage stamp attached; but such card must contain absolutely no written matter except the address. Otherwise it will be treated as not fully prepaid and refused admission into the mails.

All cards different from those herein described, bearing embossed or printed postage stamps, and purporting to be United States postal cards, are counterfeit; and the manufacture of such cards or the attempt to use the same will subject the offender to a fine of five hundred dollars and imprisonment for five years. (Sec. 178, Postal Code.)

Postmasters will not, under any circumstances, be permitted to reduce or exchange postal cards that may be misdirected, spoiled in printing, or otherwise rendered unfit for use, in the hands of private holders.

The department will not furnish less than 500 cards on the order of a postmaster. Individuals desiring postal cards will purchase them of a postmaster, as in no case can they obtain them upon direct application to the department.

Notice.—From, and after this date until the first of September next, the County Commissioners will be in session on Saturday of each week. apr9-3w

The "ensuing season" advertisement in last week's Radical will afford chaste reading for the children of the patrons of that great "family newspaper." Advertisements, written in that form, have not appeared in any respectable newspaper in this county for many years.

There appears to be a serious hitch in the matter of the appointment of Senators Rutan and Davis as Commissioners from this State to the Vienna Exhibition. We have no doubt both gentlemen are perfectly willing to spend their portion of the $6,000 appropriated by the Legislature for the use of the Commissioners, but their appointment, it appears, is unconstitutional. The Harrisburg correspondent of the Philadelphia Press says: There is a "hitch" in the little job gotten up in the Senate during its last session, to send three Commissioners to the Vienna Exposition. I told you in my last letter that a number of Senators were exceedingly anxious to go, but the trouble is, no Senator or Member of the last House can be appointed, because the Constitution expressly forbids such action. As if to make the matter perfectly strong, and avoid all misunderstanding on the subject, the framers of the constitution inserted two clauses in different parts of the instrument, declaring that no Senator or Representative shall be appointed to an office created during his term. Both provisions were inserted at the same time. It now remains to be seen whether the Governor will appoint Senator Rutan, who has made his arrangements to go, and Senator Davis, of Berks, who was promised the appointment for a little service he rendered on the apportionment bill. With the exception of Senator Rutan, the reference to other Senators in my last letter on this subject was mere conjecture. Rutan was repeatedly observed, after the bill creating the commission had passed, studying bills of advertising for ocean steamers, having had quite an amount of such literature on hand. But the question now is: Will the Governor dare violate a plain provision of the constitution by appointing these Senators? I know he has pledged himself to do so. Messrs. Rutan and Davis are appointed, but when will the announcement be made and the third man selected? This question is of considerable importance as involving a constitutional principle, respect or disrespect for which will indicate the real mettle of which the administration is formed.—*Pitts. The Chinese question has about exhausted itself, and quiet seems to reign in this county touching it. The people of Beaver Falls, and vicinity, have taken the "sober second thought," and concluded to give the Chinese operatives a fair chance, and see what will come of the question, which, only a short time ago "convulsed" so many of our inhabitants. A few days since we paid a flying visit to the cutlery works and found our new population hard at work, inoffensive, and as quiet as though they were so many mice. That they mind their own business, and meddle with no one else's, is quickly seen after going into their presence. If we could all be induced to take a lesson from the "heathen Chinee" in that particular, we would no doubt be all the better for doing so.

75 Cents and $30,000.—When I was in San Francisco, I gave $10 00 for a carriage to take me to a seal rock where I might see the huge Sea Lions always basking there ten rods from the shore. After viewing these marvelous monsters for half an hour I offered $30,000 to have nine of these animals captured and delivered to me in Cincinnati. The laws would not permit these Sea Lions to be molested at all, but by dint of energy and lavish expenditure I procured nine immense Sea Lions from Alaska, each of which eat from 60 to 100 lbs of fish per day. Several of these magnificent animals are placed in my traveling exhibition without extra charge, while there are held in reserve at my residence in Cincinnati doing their best to eat their heads off. Many other rare animals of which I am compeled to have duplicates in case of death live in a state of the same dignified retirement, and are constantly in the same laudible occupation of swallowing themselves (in value), considering that I charge but 75 cents to my entire show. The Sea Lions which I gave $10 to look at and $30,000 to capture costs visitors about 3 cents to see. JOHN ROBINSON.

"The Last Loaf."—We had the good fortune to be present at the Town Hall in Rochester, on Friday and Saturday evenings last, to witness one of the most popular temperance dramas of the present day, entitled "The Last Loaf," concluded with the performance of the laughable farce, entitled "The Rough Diamond," presented by the Rochester Amateur Dramatic Association. The members of the association have learned their parts so well that they render these plays with as much satisfaction as any of the performers that play night after night before the foot-lights in some of our most prominent theatres; and having been greeted with crowded houses on the evenings referred to, they have concluded to repeat it on Friday evening of this week, at which time we advise all our friends to be present and enjoy themselves, as it is an excellent treat.

Whole number of public examinations, 1; whole number of females examined, 2; whole number of provisional certificates issued, 2; whole number of official visits to schools, 30; average time spent at each, 1h 25m; whole number of Directors with Superintendent, 13; whole number of patrons with Superintendent, 19; whole number of days spent in official duties, 21; whole number of miles traveled, 236; whole number of official letters written, 15.

Official visits have been made to all of the schools in the county, and twenty-one have been visited the second time. The schools in the rural districts have closed with but few exceptions. I very much regret my inability to be present at more of the examinations which were held at the close of many of the schools, but owing to the fact that many of them took place on the same day, it was impossible to do so. I heartily approve of the custom of spending the last two days of the term in examination and review, and hope that directors will give this matter more attention next year. I would recommend them to insert this as one of the requirements in the article of agreement between directors and teachers.

Teachers in possession of rated professional certificates granted in this county, will please forward them to me to be endorsed.

A special examination for professional certificates will be held at the office of the County Superintendent in Beaver, commencing on Friday, May 9, at 9 o'clock, a. m., and continues two days. Applicants for certificates will be required to bring recommendations from a majority of the board or boards of directors in whose employment they shall have taught for two preceding annual school terms.

General Jail Delivery.—On last Saturday evening the sheriff of Washington county was no little surprised, on making his last call for the night on the prisoners in the jail, to find that all but two, had vamosed the ranch. The two remaining were too old and decrepid to leave, also we presume they too would have silently stole away. Briceland, the murderer of Allingham, is among the missing. The Sheriff offers a reward of $300,00 for his capture. While the Sheriff was eating his supper, it is supposed, some "outsider" got hold of his keys, unlocked the main door of the prison, then likewise unlocked the various cell doors and let all the "captives go free." The whole county is excited over the "delivery," and a very large number of people are scouring the country in all directions, with a view of capturing the whole or at least a part of the flown birds.

FRANK MCCARTY, not only makes the best Lubricating oils in the country; but he also makes a superior quality of Benzine, prepared by a patented process that entirely deprives it of any oily substance, rendering it one of the best preparations for cleaning type or gumbed machinery of any kind, Point Oil Works, Smith's Ferry, Beaver county, Pa.

SELECT MISCELLANY.

DETERMINED TO WIN.

"Of all the things this is the worst! If I ever in my life expected to hear such news! Why, our George has gone and got married. Do you hear?"

Good Mrs. Clemens pushed her seal-bowed spectacles off her bright eyes, and dropped her letter in her lap, and she turned round to her husband, the stout, clever old farmer, who was contentedly stroking the old white cat.

"Deacon, d'ye hear?"

This time, when she asked the question, there was sharpness in her voice.

"Yes—what if he is married? I'm sure it's natural enough. It kind o' runs in the family, 'pears to me."

But Mrs. Clements would take no notice of this little pleasantry.

Well, if you like it, I can tell you I don't. He needn't think he's coming here with his fine city-bred lady, all airs and graces, and flounces and flattered ruffles. I do declare, I think George is a fool!"

* * * * *

A graceful, dainty little lady, in a garnet poplin and ruffled apron, with a small proud-poised head, covered with short, dusky curls, and a pair of dark blue eyes, so wistful and tender, a tiny rosebud of a mouth, and a dimple in one pink cheek.

That was Mrs. Marion Clements. Was it any wonder that George had fallen in love with her?

She sat in her bright little parlor, close beside the lace-curtained window, watching for the loved husband's return; and then, when she neard the click of the latch-key in the hall, flew for the welcome kiss.

"Haven't you got the letter this time, George? I've felt sure of that all day. Indeed, I've quite decided what dresses to take with me."

He smiled, and shook his head.

A cloud passed over her face.

"O, George, isn't it too bad? And I do believe—oh! I don't believe they will write, because they are sorry you married me."

He put his arms around her neck.

"And, supposing such to be the case, do you think it would make any difference to me?"

"Oh, no! only it would grieve me so if I had alienated your parents from you."

"And a one-sided alienation it would be, too! They have never seen you! And when they know you, can't help loving you!"

"O, George!"

And the exclamation was caused by the kiss accompanying his loving flattery.

"That's true as preaching. By the by, my dear, what would you say if the firm sent me off on a traveling tour of six weeks?"

A little dismayed cry answered him.

"You won't say here alone, eh? But Marion, it would be five hundred dollars clear gain to us."

"What need we care for money? I'd rather have you."

A mischievous smile played on the young man's lip; he was more matter-of-fact, than this romantic, tender little wife of his.

I think, the addition to our balance at the bankers' would be consoling for the absence. But never mind, little pet. Let's go down to dinner. I hope we'll get a letter from home soon."

And, soon it was; for Marion snatched it from his coat pocket the very next night. But her husband's face looked very grave and stern, and his eyes looked angry, when she looked gleefully over the envelope.

"My dear, you must remember that I care very little for what the letter contains. Remember I did not write it; that you are dearer to me than ever before. Kiss me first while I watch you."

A little pang of misdoubt troubled her, when she glaneed over the note; then tears stole from under her lashes, and George saw her tender mouth quiver and tremble; then when she had finished it, she laid her head down on his shoulder and cried.

It was cruel to let you see it, my wounded birdie. Let me burn it. And don't forget, darling, what the Bible says, that a man shall leave his father and mother, and cleave unto his wife. You are my precious wife, Marion, and to you I turn for all the happiness my life will ever hold."

He dried her tears, and they talked it over.

"Just because I am city bred, she thinks I am lazy and haughty, and dainty, and"—

"Never mind, Marion. She will find out some day. My father"—

"Yes, bless the dear old man. He has added: 'My love to my daughter Marion.' Oh, I know I should love him, and your mother, too, if she would let me."

"We will invite them down when I come home. By the way, Marion, I will stop at the farm on my way home, and invite them down. and bring them home with me."

"George, dear, I have been thinking about that trip West. I think you had better go and leave me at home. It won't be so very long."

Marion was eating her egg, while she spoke across the cosy little tete-a tete breakfast table.

"Spoken like my true little Marion, and when I come back I'll bring you a present. What shall it be."

"Your mother and father from the farm. It shall be that hope that will bear me company when you are gone."

A fortnight after that, Marion Clements ate her breakfast alone, the traces of a tear or so on her pink cheek; then dashed them away with a merry joyous little laugh.

"This will never do, and now that George has gone for six weeks, to prepare for his return. And I pray heaven it shall be such a coming as shall delight his very soul."

* * * * *

"I am sure I don't know what to say. The land knows, I need help bad enough, but it 'pears to me, such a slender little midget as you couldn't earn your salt. What did you say your name was?"

"Mary Smith. And indeed, if you will try me for a week, I'm sure you'll keep me till the season is over."

Mrs. Clements looked out of the window at the great clouds that were piling gloomily up; and then the wind gave a great wailing shriek around the corners of the house.

"You can cook, can you? or shake up feather-beds—good big ones—forty pounders."

"Indeed I can. I may not cook to suit you, but I can learn."

Mrs. Clements walked out to the huge open fire place in the kitchen where the deacon was shelling corn.

"What d'ye say, deacon, keep her or not? I kind o' like her looks, and the dear knows it 'ud be a good lift, while we're killin', if she couldn't more'n set the table or make mush for the bread."

"Take her of course, Hannah. You are hard driv', I know. Let her stop a week or so, anyhow."

So Mrs. Clements came slowly back and sat down again."

"You can't get away to-night; there's a sugar storm been brewin' these three days, and it's on us now, sure enough. See them 'ere flakes.

Then followed directions to the west garret; and, when she was gone, Mrs. Clements turned to the deacon: "I never saw a girl before I'd trust up-stairs alone. I can tell you that, if nothing else."

Directly, she came down in a purple print dress and white apron, her hair brushed off from her face, into a net; a narrow linen collar, fastened with a sailor's loop of narrow black ribbon. It seemed as if she had life too, so handily she flitted in and out of the big pantry and then down the cellar. Then, after the meal she gathered the dishes in a neat, silent way, that was perfect bliss to Mrs. Clements' ears.

"She's determined to earn her bread, anyhow, and I like her turn too."

And the deacon had "taken a shine" to Mary Smith. One by one the days wore on; the hog killing was over and done; long strings of sausages hung in fantastic rings, arranged by Mary's deft fingers; sweet hams and shoulders were pited away in true housewifely manner, and now Mary and Mrs. Clements were sitting in the sunny dining room, darning patching and mending.

"I don't know what I am going to do without you, Mary, I dread to see you pack up your clothes."

A blush of pleasure overspread Mary's face.

"I am so glad you have been suited with my work. Indeed, I have tried."

"It ain't the work altogether, though. Goodness knows your the smartest gal I've seen in many a day. As I say, it ain't the work—it's you Mary. I've got to thinking a heap of you—me and the deacon."

Mary's voice trembled at the kindness of the old lady's tone, but she sewed rapidly on.

"It is so uncommon lonesome since the boy left the farm, but it's worse since he got married. It seems like deserting us altogether."

"Have you a son? You never mentioned him."

"No—George has gone his way, and we must go ours. Yes—he married one of those crack-headed boarding house people, who can't tell the difference between a rolling pin and a milk pan."

But, despite her scorn, Mrs. Clements dashed off her tears with her brown fist.

"Is his wife pretty? I suppose you love her dearly?"

"I don't know anything about her, and never want to know. He's left us for her, too. Mary just turn them cakes around; seems as if they were burning."

When Mary had turned the cakes around, Mrs. Clements was leaning on the arm of her chair.

"Mary, supposin' you stop on with us another month, anyhow. The deacon will make it all right."

"It isn't the money I care for, Mrs. Clements; I only wish I might stay always. You don't know how much I love—

"Love us! do you? Bless your heart. If poor George had only picked you out, what a comfort it would be to us all! But it can't be helped now."

She sighed wearily, then glancing out of the window, looked a moment, then threw down her work.

"Bless my soul, if there ain't our son George coming up the lane! Deacon! Deacon! George is coming!"

And her mother's love rushing to her heart, she hurried out to meet him. Oh, the welcoming, the reproaches, the caresses, the determination to love him still, despite the poor, innocent little Marion! Then, when the table had been set in the next room by Mary's deft fingers, and she had returned to her "west garret," Mrs. Clements opened her heart.

"There's no use talkin', George, this fine, fancy lady of your's 'll never suit me. Give me a smart girl like Mary Smith, and I'll ask no more. Come in to supper, now. Mary, Mary!"

She raised her voice to call the girl, when a low voice near surprised me.

"Oh, you dressed up in honor of my boy. Well. I must confess, I never knew you had such a handsome dress, and you look like a picture with your net off, and them short, bobbin curls. George, this is Mary Smith!"

George came through the door, and glanced carelessly at the corner where the young woman stood. Then, with a cry, sprang with outstretched arms to meet the little figure that sprang into them. The Deacon and Mrs. Clements stood in speechless amazement. Then Marion, all blushes and tearful smiles, went over to the old pair and took their hand.

"I am George's wife. I was so afraid you would never love me, so I came determined to win you if I could. Mother, father, may I be your daughter?"

And a happier family, when they had exhausted their powers of surprise, amazement, and pride in the beautiful Marion, gave thank over a supper table.

The Wrecked Atlantic.

[From the Philadelphia Press April 12th.]

During the past week, in Philadelphia, New York, London, and, in fact, all over America and Europe, the one great subject of discussion has been the terrible calamity on the Nova Scotia coast. Who was to blame was the question of the hour. The verdict is unanimous, press and people alike holding the view that either the company or its officers are guilty. Old sea captains, men who for years watched over the lives of those crossing the Atlantic, say the men in charge of the vessel should be held responsible. All the newspapers condemn in the strongest language the crime, for such it may now be called, of leaving Liverpool with only a short supply of coal and provisions. The news of the calamity carries sorrow and desolation to a thousand homes and hearts, while to the friends of the poor steerage passengers seeking a home here, and the friends of those of high degree sleeping soundly in the sumptuous saloons of the doomed vessel, it comes with a numbing power, and it will be many a day before the general public will recover from the awful shock. Many who read the frightful story of the five hundred and twenty-five souls hurried into eternity without a word of warning will never forget it, and those who have been saved will think of the hundreds of their fellow passengers drowned in their berths with a feeling that can hardly be described. A careful review of the testimony thus far given before the wreck court at Halifax by cabin passengers, the surviving officer, and the captain himself, goes far to confirm the impression that both the company and the captain are wholly responsible for the tragedy. Food as well as fuel gave out. Captain Williams gives as a reason for turning the ship's head to Halifax that, on the 31st of March, when only eleven days out, "the chief steward reported the stores short; fresh provisions enough for the saloon for two days, and but salt for the steerage for two days, when all but bread and rice would be out." When only eight days out the coal was reported short. On the 31st there were but one hundred and twenty-seven tons left, with four hundred and sixty miles of heavy sea between the Atlantic and Sandy Hook. Coming to the terrible disaster on the rocks, the evidence tells us that the captain was out of his reckoning. He had never been on that iron-bound coast before. Except the third officer, neither captain nor mates had been in Halifax. He took no soundings, nor did he order any, "because the night was clear." He was on deck at twenty minutes past twelve, and left orders to be awakened at three. The ship was running at twelve knots an hour, and no lookout seems to have been kept. This is the sum and substance of the testimony. Few will read it without rendering a verdict, at least against the White Star Company, and all will hold it responsible for the five hundred and sixty lives sacrificed.

Will of Napoleon III.

The Will of Napoleon III, has been proved in England. His personal property is sworn at under £120,000, and this he leaves to the Empress without reserve. To the Prince Imperial there is but one bequest, says the Pall Mall Gazette—the Imperial crown. If this be true, adds that paper, we have here a certain violation of the idee Napoleonienne, according to which any Bonaparte may govern who is called by the voice of the people, and the Emperor's will is in this respect an important manifesto to the Imperialists. It is a message to the friends of Prince Napoleon.

President Grant in Harrisburg.

General Grant, lady and daughter, accompanied by General Babcock and lady, arrived at Reading on Saturday (from New York, via Allentown,) at 2.52 p. m. The party reached Lebanon later in the afternoon, and were met by G. Dawson Coleman and family and escorted to his sumptuous country seat, North Lebanon, in carriages, and remained the guests of ex-Senator Coleman over Sunday. The President and party reached Harrisburg in a special car, provided by the Philadelphia and Reading railroad company, Monday.

Upon the arrival of the distinguished party at the Lebanon Valley depot, in this city, they were met by J. Donald Cameron and friends—General Babcock and the ladies riding in Mr. Cameron's private carriage, and the President and Mr. Cameron proceeding on foot to the residence of the latter on Front and State streets. The distinguished party were interviewed by many of the prominent citizens of Harrisburg ladies and gentlemen—while remaining in the city. The party will proceed southward, some time to-day, on a special train provided by the Northern Central railway company.

The Clerical Hero of the Atlantic.

When horrors such as the wreck of the Atlantic comes before us, says the New York Herald, we can at times distinguish the highest attributes of manhood rising amid the gloom of death to make known the kinship of man to our idea of the divine. The rock that shivers the stately ship, the vessel that breaks upon the rock, the water that swallows, the hurricane that tosses the waters, are things material and insensible. Man alone, amid all "the horrid war of wind and waters raging" can stand out from the infernal surroundings with a gleam of the godlike upon his brow. Sudden disasters, like revolutions, produce their heroes from unexpected sources. They are tossed up by the waves, as it were, and the world can admire, although it may not understand. The one of the heroes of the wreck of the Atlantic should prove to be an Episcopal clergyman, Mr. Ancient, ought not to astonish any one; but because of the very fitness of the man's profession for his self-abnegation, his courage in a good cause, his devotion to the Master's doctrine of charity, many will find cause for wonder. That, in the most gallant manner, he risked his life a dozen times to save the lives of others; that he was first in the boat to rescue the last man from his slow agony in the frozen rigging, when men used to the terrors of the deep shrunk back from the task, places him in the front rank of those rare heroes that the world can praise and admire without a single detracting breath. He was a clergyman, men may say, and self-sacrifice is the great rule under which he had registered his life; his Master, the Great Shepherd, not only risked, but gave up his life for his flock. It would follow naturally from this that his heroism arose only from a sensitive appreciation of his duty to God, to himself and to his fellow man. The world, however, will rightly rate his heroism as something higher than mere bounden duty.

A Romance in Real Life.

A young lady, residing in the country, enjoys a large circle of acquaintance, and is possessed of enough of the things of this world to be decidedly a "good catch" for any young man. A pleasant home, the best and an abundance of society, surrounded by a large number of young men who knelt at her command or rose to the highest pitch of earthly happiness under her smile, who had to all appearances all that was required to complete her happiness. Dame Rumor had her engaged to the son of a wealthy farmer. At this point the hero of our sketch appears on the scene of action from the Fatherland. In pursuit of employment, fortune brings him to the house of our fair damsel, and there he gets employment. Scarcely a month from the old country, our mode of farming was new to him. But diligent application soon made him proficient in his occupation, and right faithfully did he serve his employer for about six months. About the time rumor was culminating, the engagement between the young lady and her country lover, she informed her mother that she loved Haus, the hired man, and was going to marry him. The mother was astounded, and emphatically put her foot down in opposition to any such movement. A few mornings after she and her lover repaired to this city, where they were bound together in bands which death or the courts alone can sever. They were copelled to sojourn in a land of strangers until the wrath of the fond mother relaxed, and her permission was granted for their return, when they immediately returned to their home.

"As Great a Swindle as the Salary Job."

The Pittsburgh Gazette of March 31st, says:

"The constituents of Gen. Garfield, in Trumbull county, Ohio, held a meeting, last week, at which resolutions were adopted calling on Garfield to resign his seat in Congress, because of having voted for the salary increase. He replied, explaining that he so voted because having the appropriation bill in charge, and the salary amendment having been tacked on, he was compelled to vote for it, or go against his own bill. Senator Morrill, of Maine, justified himself by a similar reason. As this will, no doubt be the popular reply of Congressmen when questioned on this subject we will take occasion to say that the reason alleged is as great a swindle as the salary job. No one knows better than they that it could have been kept off from the appropriation bill had they so desired."

Adjournment of the Legislature.

HARRISBURG, April 10, 1873.

Both branches of the Legislature adjourned to-day sine die. Presents were made to the various retiring officers. Mr. Strang took his place as Speaker of the Senate, and everything moved off quietly.

Treasurer Mackey was reported quite ill to-day.

Among the members who received testimonials were Mr. Mahon, of Franklin, a gold headed cane, Colonel Ballantine, of Allegheny, a magnificient chronometer watch, Mr. Young, an ebony cane, Sample and Ramsey a set of diamond studs.

Tobacco Receipts at Lynchburg

We take the following from the Lynchburg Va.) Republican of a recent date: For the six months ending April 1, 1872, there were received at the various warehouses in Lynchburg, Va., 4,700,000 pounds of tobacco in hogsheads, boxes and loose, for the six months ending April 1, 1873, there were received at the same warehouse 7,449,180 pounds of tobacco, showing an increase for the past six months, over the six months of 1871 and 1872, of nearly three million pounds! Of this immense increase 314,730 pounds were in hogsheads, and 2, 502, 381 pounds were loose, decrease in boxes, 68, 041 pounds; average weight of hogsheads last year, 535 pounds, average weight this year, 601 pounds; average weight of boxes last year, 221 pounds; average weight this year, 233 pounds.

—A young lady at Toledo fainted when told that over five hundred thousand men died during ast year, but was revived by the information that there were thirteen million left.

RHEUMATISM NEURALGIA

WE CLERGYMEN WERE CURED

of Chronic and Acute Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Sciatica, Kidney, and Nervous Diseases, after years of suffering, by taking Dr. Fitler's Vegetable Rheumatic Syrup—the scientific discovery of J. P. Fitler, M. D., a regular graduate physician, with whom we are personally acquainted, who has for 20 years treated these diseases extensively with astonishing results. We believe it our christian duty, after deliberation, to conscientiously request sufferers to use it, especially persons in moderate circumstances who cannot afford to waste time and money on worthless mixtures. As clergymen we seriously feel the deep responsibility resting on us in publicly endorsing this medicine. But our knowledge and experience of its remarkable merit fully justifies our action. Rev. C. H. Seviere, of Canada, suffered sixteen years, became hopeless. Rev. Thomas Murphy, D. D., Frankfort, Philadelphia. Rev. J. B. Davis, Hightstown, New Jersey. Rev. J. S. Buchanan, Clarence, Iowa. Rev. G. W. Smith, Pittsford, New York. Rev. Joseph Beggs, Falls Church, Philadelphia. Other testimonials from Senators, Governors, Judges, Congressmen, Physicians, &c., forwarded gratis with pamphlet explaining these diseases. One thousand dollars will be presented to any one who can prove that we use anything of equal merit under test, or that can produce one-forth as many living cures. Any person sending by letter description of affliction can have advice legally signed guarantee, naming the number of bottles to cure, agreeing to refund money upon sworn statement of its failure to cure. Afflicted invited to write to Dr. Fitler, Philad'a. His valuable advice costs nothing.
